The chapter title is the whole chapter in one sentence. 김치찌개 is the dish, 하나 is 'one' from the native numbers you learned in chapter 6, and 주세요 is the -으세요 form of 주다, 'to give'. Say it in a restaurant and you have ordered.

The two grammar points are a matched pair, and they split the conversation between you and the waiter. -고 싶다 is what you want (저는 김치찌개를 먹고 싶어요), -으세요 is what you ask of someone else (김치찌개 하나 주세요). Learn which side of the table each belongs to and you will not mix them up.

도입

Warm-up

여기는 어디예요?

Where is this?

여러분은 어느 식당에 자주 가요?

Which restaurant do you go to often?

The page shows three restaurant scenes. In the first, three men share a bubbling 찌개 and a grill set into the table — a Korean restaurant. In the second, a family eats pizza and salad with knives and forks — an Italian one. In the third, two people sit at a round white table with 짜장면 and 탕수육 — a Chinese one. Those three, plus the 분식집 and 일식집 on the next page, are the five kinds of restaurant this chapter names.

여기는 어디예요? is literally 'as for here, where is it?' Korean puts the place word 여기 first and asks 어디 second, the reverse of English. The 는 marks 여기 as what the sentence is about.

어느 means 'which one out of a known set' — which of these restaurants. Compare 무슨 on the next page, which asks 'what kind': 무슨 음식을 좋아해요? does not assume a list in front of you. Both translate as 'what' in English, so the distinction has to be learned from Korean, not from the translation.

자주 means 'often' and goes before the verb: 자주 가요. Frequency words in Korean sit next to the verb, never at the end of the sentence as English so often puts them.

이탈리아 식당 — an Italian restaurant

Four of the five names end in 집, 'house': 한식집, 분식집, 일식집, 중국집. 한식 is Korean food, 일식 Japanese food, 분식 literally 'flour food' — the cheap noodle-and-rice-cake places students eat in. Only the Italian one takes 식당 instead, because 이탈리아집 is not a word. When you learn a new cuisine, guess 집 first and check.

찌개 is a thick, salty stew shared from one pot in the middle of the table; 탕 (as in 삼계탕) is a clearer soup served in your own bowl. The difference matters when you order: one 찌개 feeds the table, one 탕 feeds one person.

The loanwords are written by sound, and Korean has no f or v: 피자, 스파게티, 햄버거, 샐러드, 돈가스. Read them aloud and they resolve — but do not expect the spelling to match the English, because it is transcribing how the word is said, not how it is written.

여러분은 무슨 음식을 좋아해요? 무슨 음식을 안 좋아해요? 친구와 이야기해 보세요.

What food do you like? What food don't you like? Talk about it with a classmate.

가 무슨 음식을 좋아해요?

What food do you like?

나 저는 떡볶이를 좋아해요.

I like tteokbokki.

연습 — Ask these two questions and note the answers for 나, 친구 1, 친구 2

무슨 음식을 좋아해요?

What food do you like?

무슨 음식을 안 좋아해요?

What food don't you like?

안 좋아해요 is the 안 negative from chapter 6, and 좋아하다 behaves as one verb here — 안 goes in front of the whole thing, not inside it. It is not a 하다 verb built on a noun, so the split you learned for 출근 안 해요 does not apply.

동-고 싶다

Verb + -고 싶다 — wanting to do something

어떤 행동을 하기 원함을 나타낼 때 사용해요.

Used to say that you want to do something.

가 라민 씨, 뭐 먹고 싶어요?
Ramin, what do you want to eat?

나 저는 냉면을 먹고 싶어요.
I want to eat naengmyeon.

예문 — Examples

가 오늘 뭐 하고 싶어요?
What do you want to do today?

나 쇼핑을 하고 싶어요.
I want to go shopping.

저는 가족을 만나고 싶어요.
I want to see my family.

-고 싶다 — attaches straight to the stem

먹다 → 먹고 싶다 to want to eat

입다 → 입고 싶다
to want to wear

가다 → 가고 싶다
to want to go

만나다 → 만나고 싶다
to want to meet

Tip

그 사람은/그 친구는 + '~고 싶어 하다'
Someone else's wish takes 싶어 하다, not 싶다

-고 싶다 is the easiest ending in the book to attach: no 받침 check, no vowel harmony, nothing changes. Drop the 다 and add 고 싶다. 먹다 → 먹고 싶다, 가다 → 가고 싶다. Every verb behaves the same way.

The Tip is the rule learners miss. Korean lets you claim only your own wishes: use 싶다 for 저 and for a question to the person in front of you, but 싶어 하다 for anyone else. 후엔 씨는 고향 음식을 먹고 싶어 해요 — Huyen wants to eat food from home. Saying 후엔 씨는 먹고 싶어요 claims you know her mind from the inside, and Korean grammar will not let you.

The object keeps its own particle: 냉면을 먹고 싶어요, 가족을 만나고 싶어요. 을/를 stays attached to the noun, and 싶다 changes nothing about the rest of the sentence.

싶다 conjugates like an adjective, which is why the polite form is 싶어요 and not 싶어요. You will meet 싶다 only in these paired endings — it is never a verb on its own.

연습 1 — 뭐 하고 싶어요? 이야기해 보세요.

가 제이슨 씨, 무엇을 하고 싶어요?
Jason, what do you want to do?

나 저는 바다에 가고 싶어요.
I want to go to the sea.

보기) 제이슨, 바다에 가다

Jason — to go to the sea

1) 이링, 쉬다

Yiling — to rest

2) 후엔, 고향 음식을 먹다

Huyen — to eat food from home

3) 박민수, 집에 일찍 가다

Park Minsu — to go home early

고향 is your home town or home country, and 고향 음식 is the food you grew up on — a word this textbook uses constantly, because it is written for people living away from it.

연습 2 — 여러분은 지금 뭐 하고 싶어요? 친구하고 이야기해 보세요.

가 지금 뭐 하고 싶어요?
What do you want to do right now?

나 저는 집에 가고 싶어요.
I want to go home.

나 저는 고향 음식을 먹고 싶어요.
I want to eat food from home.

뭐 and 무엇 are the same word — 뭐 is the everyday spoken form, 무엇 the fuller one. The book uses 무엇을 하고 싶어요? in the model and 뭐 하고 싶어요? in the instruction, and note that 뭐 usually drops the 을 in speech.

어휘와 문법 2

Vocabulary & grammar 2

식당에 뭐가 있어요? 사람들이 뭐 해요?

What is there in the restaurant? What are the people doing?

The page is one large drawing of a busy Korean restaurant. A queue waits outside the window; a customer writes her name on the waiting list at the counter; a server shows a couple to their table; another takes an order from a menu; and at a table on the left a diner raises her hand to ask for more side dishes. The words below are the labels attached to those people and objects.

식당에서 — things on the table

반찬

side dishes

숟가락

spoon

젓가락 chopsticks

그릇

bowl, dish

메뉴

menu

식당에서 — what people are doing

기다리다 to wait

주문하다

to order

식당 표현 — what people are saying

이름을 쓰세요.

Write your name.

반찬 좀 더 주세요.

Some more side dishes, please.

불고기 3인분 주세요.

Bulgogi for three, please.

물 좀 주세요.

Some water, please.

반찬 are the small shared dishes that arrive without being ordered, and in most Korean restaurants refills are free — which is exactly why 반찬 좀 더 주세요 is worth memorising as a block. 더 means 'more' and goes before the noun's verb, and 좀 softens the request.

좀 is a shortened 조금, 'a little'. It carries no real meaning here; it just takes the edge off an order. 물 주세요 is correct but blunt, like 'water'; 물 좀 주세요 is 'could I get some water'. Add it to almost any request and you will sound more natural.

인분 is the counter for portions of food and takes Sino-Korean numbers: 1인분, 2인분, 3인분 — 일인분, 이인분, 삼인분. Not 세인분. Meat at a Korean restaurant is nearly always ordered this way rather than by the dish.

숟가락 and 젓가락 both end in 가락, but notice the different 받침: ㄷ in 숟, ㅈ in 젓. Together they are called 수저, the word the culture page uses. Korean is one of the few chopstick cultures that uses the spoon for rice and soup as an equal partner.

동-으세요

Verb + -으세요 — telling someone to do something

다른 사람에게 무엇을 하라고 시킬 때 사용해요.

Used to tell or ask another person to do something.

가 여러분, 앉으세요.
Everyone, please sit down.

나 네.
Yes.

예문 — Examples

가 오늘 7시에 전화하세요.
Call me at seven today.

나 네, 알겠습니다.
Yes, understood.

영화가 7시에 시작해요. 빨리 오세요.
The film starts at seven. Come quickly.

-으세요 — after a final consonant (받침)

앉다 → 앉으세요 please sit

읽다 → 읽으세요 please read

★ 들다 → 들으세요
please listen — irregular

-세요 — after a vowel

가다 → 가세요 please go

보다 → 보세요 please look

The 으 is there for sound alone, exactly as it was in 이에요/예요 back in chapter 1. Stem ends in a consonant, you need the 으 to get to 세요; stem ends in a vowel, the 세요 attaches directly. Look at the last letter of the stem, not at the meaning.

들다 carries a star because it is a ㄷ-irregular verb: before a vowel the ㄷ becomes ㄹ, giving 들으세요 rather than 들으세요. The same shift produces 들어요. A handful of common verbs do this — 걷다 → 걸으세요, 묻다 → 물으세요 — and they have to be learned one at a time.

-으세요 is polite but it is still a command, so it belongs to someone with the standing to give one: a teacher to a class, a server to a customer, a friend offering you a seat. To an obvious superior, soften it into a question instead — 앉으시겠어요? — or use a different form altogether.

주세요 is this same ending on 주다, 'to give', and it is the single most useful word in the chapter. 주다 ends in a vowel, so it takes plain -세요. Put any noun in front of it and you have a request: 물 주세요, 메뉴 주세요, 김치찌개 하나 주세요.

연습 1 — 선생님이 수업 시간에 무슨 말을 많이 해요?

보기 이야기하다 → 이야기하세요.
to talk → Please talk.

1) 공책에 쓰다
to write in your notebook

2) 책을 읽다
to read the book

3) 잘 듣다
to listen carefully

Work the three out before checking: 쓰다 ends in a vowel → 쓰세요; 읽다 has a 받침 → 읽으세요; 듣다 is the irregular → 들으세요. These are the three sentences you will hear in every Korean classroom.

연습 2 — 식당에서 음식을 주문해 보세요.

1) 중국집

a Chinese restaurant

2) 한식집

a Korean restaurant

3) 일식집

a Japanese restaurant

4) 분식집

a snack shop

가 짜장면 하나 주세요.
One jjajangmyeon, please.

나 네, 잠깐만 기다리세요.
Certainly, please wait a moment.

짜장면 하나 주세요 has no counter and no particle — just dish, number, 주세요. For plates of food in a restaurant Korean lets you count with the bare native number: 하나, 둘, 셋. Nowhere else in the language is counting this simple, so use it while you can.

잠깐만 is 'just a moment', with 만 meaning 'only'. 기다리세요 on its own would be a bare order to wait; 잠깐만 기다리세요 is what a server actually says, and it is worth hearing as one phrase.

말하기와 듣기

Speaking & listening

잠시드 씨와 라흐만 씨가 식당에서 주문해요. 다음과 같이 이야기해 보세요.

Jamshid and Rahman are ordering in a restaurant. Practise the conversation below.

잠시드 저는 된장찌개를 먹고 싶어요. 라흐만 씨는요?

I want doenjang stew. How about you, Rahman?

라흐만 저는 김치찌개를 먹고 싶어요.

I want kimchi stew.

잠시드 여기요, 김치찌개 하나, 된장찌개 하나 주세요.

Excuse me — one kimchi stew and one doenjang stew, please.

Swap in these pairs

1) 된장찌개 | 김치찌개

doenjang stew | kimchi stew

2) 삼계탕 | 비빔밥

samgyetang | bibimbap

여기요 literally means 'here', and it is how you call a server in Korea — said towards the staff, not shouted. 저기요 works the same way. There is no Korean equivalent of catching someone's eye silently; you are expected to say it out loud.

라흐만 씨는요? is the whole of 'and you?' — topic marker plus 요, nothing else. It throws the question you were just asked straight back, and it works after any question: 저는 김밥을 좋아해요. 후엔 씨는요?

Notice how the order sentence is built: dish, 하나, comma, dish, 하나, 주세요. One 주세요 covers the whole list at the end. You do not repeat it for each dish, and there is no word for 'and' between them.

연습 2 — 여러분은 식당에서 뭘 먹고 싶어요? 친구와 이야기해 보세요.

가 뭘 먹고 싶어요?

What do you want to eat?

나 글썄요, 저는 ~

Well, let me see ... I'd like ...

뭘 is 무엇을 squeezed down: 무엇을 → 뭐를 → 뭘. All three are correct; 뭘 is what you will hear. And 글썄요 is the sound of thinking — the polite way to hold the floor while you decide, rather than answering with silence.

듣기 — 두 사람이 식당에서 음식을 주문해요. 잘 듣고 답해 보세요.

1) 두 사람은 어느 식당에 있어요?

Which restaurant are the two of them in?

☐ 한식집 ☐ 중국집 ☐ 분식집 ☐ 일식집

Korean · Chinese · snack shop · Japanese

2) 안젤라 씨는 된장찌개를 먹고 싶어 해요?

Does Angela want to eat doenjang stew?

3) 두 사람은 무엇을 주문해요?

What do the two of them order?

Question 2 uses 먹고 싶어 해요, not 먹고 싶어요 — Angela is a third person, so the wish takes 싶어 하다. This is the Tip from page 75 appearing in a real question, and it is a reliable clue: whenever you see 싶어 하다, the sentence is about someone other than the speaker.

원 is the currency and follows the number with no space in writing. Prices are read in Sino-Korean: 2,000원 is 이천 원, 12,000원 is 만 이천 원. Korean groups by 만 (ten thousand), not by thousand, so 16,000 is 만 육천 — 'ten-thousand six-thousand'. Reading a menu aloud is the cheapest way to practise this.

김밥마을 means 'Gimbap Village' and 복성루 is a Chinese-style name — real restaurant names, not dish names. The clue to what a place serves is the menu, and often the last syllable: 루 and 성 signal a 중국집 the way 마을 signals somewhere homely and cheap.

Questions

1) 김밥마을에 뭐가 있어요?

What is on the menu at Gimbap Maeul? → 김밥, 치즈김밥, 라면, 순대, 떡볶이, 어묵이 있어요

2) 탕수육을 먹고 싶어요. 어느 식당에 가요?

You want sweet and sour pork. Which restaurant do you go to? → 복성루에 가요

3) 여러분은 뭐 먹고 싶어요? 주문해 보세요.

What do you want to eat? Order it.

여러분은 어느 식당에 가고 싶어요? 뭐 먹고 싶어요? 써 보세요.

저는 ____을/를 좋아해요. 그리고 ____을/를 좋아해요.

I like _____. And I like _____.

오늘 ____고 싶어요. 그리고 ____고 싶어요.

Today I want to _____. And I want to _____.

The second gap is written ____고 싶어요, so what goes in is a verb stem, not a noun: 먹, 가, 주문하. Writing 김밥고 싶어요 is the mistake the blank invites — it has to be 김밥을 먹고 싶어요.

문화와 정보 — 한국의 식사 예절

Culture & information — Korean table manners

한국의 식사 예절을 알아볼까요?

Shall we look at Korean table manners?

한국에서는 밥그릇, 국그릇을 들지 않아요.

In Korea you do not lift the rice bowl or the soup bowl.

그릇을 식탁 위에 놓고 음식을 먹어요.

You leave the bowl on the table and eat from it there.

그리고 숟가락과 젓가락으로 음식을 먹어요.

And you eat with a spoon and chopsticks.

어른이 먼저 수저를 들어요.

The eldest person picks up their spoon and chopsticks first.

그 후에 나이가 적은 사람, 아이들이 식사를 시작해요.

After that the younger people and the children begin to eat.

어른, 직장 상사와 술을 마실 때 고개를 돌리고 술을 마셔요.

When drinking with an elder or a superior at work, you turn your head away to drink.

어른 먼저!

Elders first!

This is the manner that catches visitors out, because it is the exact opposite of Japan and much of China, where lifting the bowl to your mouth is correct. In Korea the bowl stays down and the spoon comes up, and rice is eaten with the spoon rather than with chopsticks.

수저 is 숟가락 and 젓가락 taken as one word, and 수저를 들다 — to pick up one's spoon and chopsticks — means to start the meal. Waiting for the eldest to do it is not a formality you can skip at a family table or a work dinner; it is the moment the meal officially begins.

고개를 돌리고 술을 마셔요 describes a real, visible move: you turn your body a quarter away from the senior person, and often cover the glass with your free hand. The 고 here links two actions in sequence — turn, then drink. You will also be expected to hold your glass with both hands when it is poured for you.

한국에서는 carries 에서 plus 는: in Korea — as opposed to wherever you are from. The topic marker on top of a place particle is Korean's way of setting up a contrast, and it is the signal that a comparison with your own country is coming, which is exactly what question 3 asks for.

Questions

1) 무엇으로 음식을 먹어요?

What do you eat with? → 숟가락과 젓가락으로 먹어요

2) 어른, 직장 상사와 술을 마실 때 어떻게 해요?

What do you do when drinking with an elder or a superior at work? → 고개를 돌리고 마셔요

3) 한국의 식사 예절은 여러분 고향의 식사 예절과 무엇이 달라요?

How do Korean table manners differ from those of your home country?

무엇으로 asks 'by what means' — the particle 으로 marks the tool you use, so the answer must carry 으로 too: 숟가락과 젓가락으로. After a vowel it shortens to 로: 포크로.

Pronunciation · Vocabulary checklist

발음 1 — 다음을 듣고 따라 읽으세요.

앉으세요	[안즈세요] an-jeu-se-yo
읽으세요	[일그세요] il-geu-se-yo
먹고 싶어요	[먹꼬 시퍼요] meok-kko si-peo-yo

앉 and 읽 each end in a double 받침 — ㅈ and ㄹ. Alone, only the first letter is pronounced: 앉 is [안], 읽 is [익]. But add a vowel and the second letter wakes up and slides across: 앉으세요 → [안즈세요], 읽으세요 → [일그세요]. This is why the 으 of -으세요 changes the sound of the whole word, not just the ending.

먹고 → [먹꼬] is tensification: after a ㄱ, ㄷ, ㅂ sound, a following plain consonant hardens. The ㄱ of 고 becomes ㄱㅈ automatically — nobody chooses to do it, and it happens in every such pair. 싶어요 → [시퍼요] is ordinary linking, the ㅍ moving onto the 어.

발음 2 — 다음을 듣고 연습해 보세요.

가	이쪽으로 앉으세요. Please sit over here.
나	감사합니다. Thank you.
가	여러분, 책을 읽으세요. Everyone, please read the book.
나	네, 알겠습니다. Yes, understood.
가	뭘 먹고 싶어요? What do you want to eat?
나	저는 김밥을 먹고 싶어요. I want to eat gimbap.

이쪽으로 is 'towards this side', the same 으로 as in 손가락으로 — direction and instrument share one particle. 이쪽, 그쪽, 저쪽 are this way, that way, over there, and a server will use them constantly to seat you.
