Chapter 15 — The weather really is hot today

This chapter at a glance

주제	Topic 날씨 — the weather
어휘와 문법	Vocabulary & grammar 계절, 날씨 / 동형-네요 / 명보다 — seasons and weather · remarking on what you have just noticed · comparing one thing with another
활동	Activities 날씨 말하기, 고향 날씨 소개 글 쓰기 — talking about the weather; writing an introduction to the weather back home
문화와 정보	Culture & information 재난, 안전 안내 문자 — emergency and safety alert texts

Weather is the one subject you can safely raise with anyone in Korea — a neighbour in the lift, a colleague at the water cooler, the shopkeeper handing back your change. This chapter gives you both halves of that exchange: the words for what the sky is doing, and the ending that lets you remark on it.

The two grammar points do different jobs. -네요 is for reacting to something you have just noticed; 보다 is for comparing. Together they produce the sentence this chapter is named after, and its natural follow-up: 오늘 날씨가 정말 덥네요. 어제보다 더워요.

도입

Warm-up

무슨 계절이에요? 날씨가 어때요?

What season is it? What is the weather like?

요즘 날씨가 어때요?

What has the weather been like lately?

Three photographs, three seasons. Summer: friends in rash guards sitting on a mat at the beach, others floating on a ring in the sea behind them. Autumn: two hikers with packs stopped beside a stream, the trees on both banks turned orange. Winter: a family sledging down a snow slope on inflatable toboggans. Spring is the one season missing here — it arrives on the next page.

어때요? is the all-purpose "how is it?" — 날씨가 어때요?, 한국 음식이 어때요?, 새 집이 어때요? It comes from 어떻다, and the form you will use ninety per cent of the time is exactly this one.

요즘 means "these days, lately" — a stretch of recent time rather than a point in it. It pairs with the present tense even when the situation started a while ago: 요즘 바빠요, I've been busy lately.

Vocabulary & grammar 1

무슨 계절이에요? 날씨가 어때요?

What season is it? What is the weather like?

계절 — the seasons

봄 · 따뜻하다

spring · to be warm

여름 · 덥다

summer · to be hot

가을 · 쌀쌀하다

autumn · to be chilly

겨울 · 춥다

winter · to be cold

따뜻하다 and 덥다 are not two strengths of the same thing. 따뜻하다 is warmth you welcome — spring sun, a heated floor, soup. 덥다 is heat that bothers you. A hot bath is 따뜻해요; a hot afternoon in August is 더워요. The cold side splits the same way: 시원하다 is a pleasant cool, 춥다 is cold you would rather escape.

쌀쌀하다 sits between 시원하다 and 춥다 — the chill that makes you reach for a jacket but not a coat. It is almost only used of weather and of a person's manner (쌀쌀한 사람, a cold, distant person).

Every word on this page except the season names is a descriptive verb (형용사). It takes verb endings and conjugates exactly as an action verb does, and no separate word for "is" is ever needed — 더워요 on its own is a complete sentence. Note 덥다 → 더워요 and 춥다 → 추워요, both ㅁ-irregular: the ㅁ turns into 우 before a vowel ending. 따뜻하다 → 따뜻해요 is a plain 하다 verb, and 쌀쌀하다 → 쌀쌀해요 likewise.

여러분 고향은 지금 무슨 계절이에요? 이야기해 보세요.

What season is it back home right now? Talk about it.

가 지금 무슨 계절이에요?

What season is it there now?

나 봄이에요. 따뜻해요.

It's spring. It's warm.

무슨 계절 is the 무슨 from chapter 7, asking which one out of a known set — and four seasons is exactly such a set. 어느 계절 would also be understood, but 무슨 is what the book uses and what you will hear.

This exercise assumes the class is spread across hemispheres and climates, and it is worth taking literally. If home has a rainy season and a dry season rather than four, say so — 우기, wet season, and 건기, dry season, are the words, and Korean speakers find the answer genuinely interesting.

동형-네요

Verb/adjective + -네요

새롭게 알게 된 사실에 대해 자신의 느낌이나 생각을 표현할 때 사용해요.

Used to express your feeling or thought about something you have just come to know.

가 이링 씨, 우리 가족 사진이에요.
Yiling, this is a photo of my family.

나 아이가 정말 예쁘네요.
Your child really is lovely.

예문 — examples

가 이 잡채 좀 드세요. 제가 만들었어요.
Do have some of this japchae. I made it.

나 와! 정말 맛있네요.
Wow — this really is delicious.

라민 씨는 한국어를 정말 잘하네요.
Ramin, your Korean really is good.

-네요

먹다 → 먹네요 to eat → 먹네요

좋다 → 좋네요 to be good → 좋네요

오다 → 오네요 to come → 오네요

예쁘다 → 예쁘네요 to be pretty → 예쁘네요

★ 살다 → 사네요 to live → 사네요

★ 멀다 → 머네요 to be far → 머네요

Tip

명이네요

학생 → 학생이네요 · 커피 → 커피네요

-네요 is the ending of noticing. It does not report a fact — it reacts to one, in the moment you discover it. 맛있어요 says the food is good; 맛있네요 says you have just tasted it and are surprised and pleased. Use it about what is in front of you right now, and it will sound natural every time.

Because it is a reaction, -네요 is odd about things you already knew. Saying 한국은 겨울에 춥네요 after five winters in Korea sounds strange; saying it on your first cold morning is perfect. This is also why it makes such a good compliment — 한국어를 잘하네요 conveys that you noticed, not merely that you assessed.

It attaches straight to the stem. No 으 is inserted, so it is 먹네요, never 먹으네요 — unlike -으세요 and -을까요?, which need the extra vowel after a consonant. One less thing to decide.

The two starred verbs show the ㄹ-stem rule, and this is the important one to get right. Before ㄴ, a stem-final ㄹ simply drops: 살다 → 사네요, 멀다 → 머네요. Compare what ㄹ did in the last few chapters — in -을 거예요, -으러 and -을까요? it counted as a vowel and kept the 으 away. Here it does something different: it disappears altogether. Same letter, two behaviours, and which one applies depends on the ending that follows.

For nouns, use 이네요 after a consonant and 네요 after a vowel — 학생이네요, 커피네요. This is the same 이다 you have used since chapter 1, just wearing the new ending.

1 그림을 보고 느낌이나 생각을 말해 보세요.

1 Look at each picture and say what you feel or think.

보기 꽃이 많이 피었다 → 와! 꽃이 많이 피었네요.

Model: lots of flowers have bloomed → Wow, so many flowers have come out!

1) 바닷가에 사람이 많다

there are a lot of people at the beach

2) 단풍이 아름답다

the autumn leaves are beautiful

3) 눈썰매를 타다

to ride a sledge

The model answer is in the past tense — 피었네요, not 피네요 — because the blooming has already happened and you are looking at the result. -네요 sits after the tense marker, exactly where -어요 sat: 피 + 었 + 네요. The order is always stem, then tense, then ending.

2 지금 여러분의 느낌이나 생각을 말해 보세요.

2 Say what you are feeling or thinking right now.

오늘 한국어 수업이 재미있네요.

Today's Korean class is good fun.

오늘 기분이 좋네요.

I'm in a good mood today.

기분이 좋다 is "to be in a good mood" — 기분 is your mood or how you feel, and Korean says the mood is good rather than that you are good. The opposite is 기분이 나쁘다. Do not confuse 기분 with 느낌, which is a sensation or impression of something else.

어휘와 문법 2

Vocabulary & grammar 2

날씨가 어때요?

What is the weather like?

날씨 — weather, on the world map

영국 런던 — 안개가 끼다

London, UK — to be foggy

중국 베이징 — 천둥/번개가 치다

Beijing, China — to thunder / to lightning

미국 뉴욕 — 구름이 끼다

New York, USA — to be cloudy

베트남 하노이 — 비가 오다

Hanoi, Vietnam — to rain

러시아 모스크바 — 눈이 오다

Moscow, Russia — to snow

한국 서울 — 맑다

Seoul, Korea — to be clear, sunny

이집트 카이로 — 바람이 불다

Cairo, Egypt — to be windy

필리핀 마닐라 — 흐리다

Manila, Philippines — to be overcast

Korean weather comes in fixed noun-and-verb pairs, and the verb is not predictable from the noun. Rain and snow 오다, they come. Wind 불다, it blows. Fog and cloud 끼다, they settle in. Thunder and lightning 치다, they strike. Learn each as a two-word unit — 비가 오다, 바람이 불다 — because swapping the verbs produces nonsense.

Notice that the weather noun takes 이/가, the subject marker: 비가 와요, literally "rain comes". There is no word for "it" in Korean, so the rain itself is the subject of the sentence.

맑다 and 흐리다 are a pair worth keeping together: clear versus overcast. 흐리다 also describes anything cloudy or blurred — murky water, a dim memory. And 맑다 does the same in reverse: 맑은 물, clear water; 맑은 눈, bright eyes.

눈 is a homograph with two different lengths in careful speech: 눈 (snow) is long, 눈 (eye) is short. Almost nobody relies on that in ordinary conversation — context does the work, and 눈이 와요 will never be misheard as an eye arriving.

가 지금 서울 날씨가 어때요?

What's the weather like in Seoul right now?

나 맑아요.

It's clear.

요즘 여러분 고향은 날씨가 어때요? 이야기해 보세요.

What has the weather been like back home lately? Talk about it.

가 후엔 씨, 요즘 고향 날씨가 어때요?

Huyen, what's the weather like back home these days?

나 요즘 하노이는 비가 많이 와요.

It's been raining a lot in Hanoi lately.

많이 goes before the verb, not after the noun: 비가 많이 와요, not 많은 비가 와요. Korean prefers to modify the verb — a lot of raining rather than a lot of rain. The same shape gave you 눈이 많이 오다 and 꽃이 많이 피다 on the previous pages.

명보다

Noun + 보다

앞의 것이 비교 대상임을 나타낼 때 사용해요.

Used to mark the thing in front of it as what the comparison is made against.

가 알래스카 겨울 날씨는 어때요?
What's winter like in Alaska?

나 알래스카는 서울보다 추워요.
Alaska is colder than Seoul.

예문 — examples

가 시간이 늦었네요. 택시를 탈까요?
It's got late. Shall we take a taxi?

나 아니요, 지금은 택시보다 지하철이 더 빨라요.
No — right now the subway is faster than a taxi.

저는 농구보다 축구를 잘해요.

I'm better at football than at basketball.

보다

작년 → 작년보다

last year → than last year

러시아 → 러시아보다

Russia → than Russia

보다 marks the yardstick, not the subject — the thing you are measuring against. So 서울보다 추워요 means colder than Seoul, with Seoul as the standard. Get the order backwards and you reverse the claim, which is the single most common mistake with this particle.

The reliable pattern is A는 B보다 X: the topic first, then the standard with 보다, then the quality. 알래스카는 서울보다 추워요. If you build every comparison in that order you will not have to think about it.

보다 attaches directly to the noun with no 받침 variation at all — 작년보다, 러시아보다. And like 도 in chapter 9, it replaces the object marker rather than stacking on it: 농구보다 축구를 잘해요, never 농구를보다.

더 means "more" and is optional here, because 보다 already carries the comparison. 택시보다 지하철이 빨라요 is complete; adding 더 simply strengthens it. Most speakers do add it. The opposite is 덜, less, which is far rarer in speech.

Do not confuse this 보다 with the verb 보다, to see. They are spelled identically and share no meaning. Context separates them without effort: a particle 보다 always sits glued to a noun, while the verb takes an ending.

1 다음을 비교해서 말해 보세요.

1 Compare the following and say it aloud.

보기 백화점 / 시장 · 옷값이 비싸다 → 백화점이 시장보다 옷값이 더 비싸요.

Model: department store / market · clothes are expensive → Clothes cost more at the department store than at the market.

1) 뉴욕 / 서울 · 눈이 많이 오다

New York / Seoul · it snows a lot

2) 베이징 / 서울 · 인구가 많다

Beijing / Seoul · the population is large

3) A식당 / B식당 · 손님이 많다

Restaurant A / Restaurant B · there are a lot of customers

The model sentence has two subject markers — 백화점이 ... 옷값이 — and that is not a mistake. Korean routinely allows a large subject and a smaller one inside it: the department store is what the sentence is about, and within it the price of clothes is the thing that is high. Where most languages must restructure this into a single subject, Korean simply stacks the two.

On the map for item 2 the book prints the two populations. Beijing's reads 21,770,000명. Seoul's begins 9,765, but the final three digits are too degraded in the scan to read with confidence, so they are left out here rather than guessed at. The exercise does not depend on them — the point is only that Beijing's population is more than double Seoul's.

명 is the counter for people, so 21,770,000명 is "21,770,000 people". You met counters in chapter 5; this is the one you will see on every statistic, notice board and attendance sheet.

2 여러분 고향은 날씨가 어때요? 한국 날씨와 비교해 보세요.

2 What is the weather like back home? Compare it with the weather in Korea.

필리핀은 더워요. 한국보다 더 더워요.

The Philippines is hot. It's hotter than Korea.

Two sentences, and the second is where the work happens. State the fact, then anchor it to something your listener knows — Korea. This is exactly how you make weather back home meaningful to a Korean listener who has never been there.

말하기와 듣기

Speaking & listening

1 라흐만 씨와 이링 씨가 날씨 이야기를 해요. 다음과 같이 이야기해 보세요.

1 Rahman and Yiling are talking about the weather. Practise the conversation below.

라흐만 오늘 날씨가 정말 춥네요.

The weather really is cold today.

이링 맞아요. 이제 겨울이에요.

It is. It's winter now.

라흐만 그런데 이링 씨는 무슨 계절을 좋아해요?

By the way, which season do you like, Yiling?

이링 저는 겨울보다 여름을 더 좋아해요. 겨울은 너무 추워요.

I like summer more than winter. Winter is too cold.

이렇게 바꿔서 연습해 보세요 — practise with these substitutions

1) 춥다 | 겨울 | 겨울보다 여름을 더 좋아하다, 겨울은 너무 춥다

cold | winter | to like summer more than winter, winter is too cold

2) 덥다 | 여름 | 여름보다 겨울을 더 좋아하다, 여름은 너무 덥다

hot | summer | to like winter more than summer, summer is too hot

This four-line exchange is the chapter in miniature, and it is worth memorising whole. Remark on the weather with -네요, agree, pivot with 그런데, then compare with 보다. It is a complete small-talk conversation, and the opening line works on any day of the year with one adjective swapped.

그런데 changes the subject — "by the way, anyway". It is how Korean moves from the weather to something you actually want to ask, and it is one of the most useful connectives in casual speech. It can also mean "but"; here it is the topic-shifting sense.

너무 means "too much", excessively. In careful usage 너무 추워요 is a complaint, while 아주 추워요 is a neutral "very cold". In everyday speech 너무 has drifted towards plain emphasis and you will hear 너무 좋아요 constantly, but the exercise here uses it in its proper sense: winter is colder than she would like.

2 여러분은 무슨 계절을 좋아해요? 왜 좋아해요? 이야기해 보세요.

2 Which season do you like? Why? Talk about it.

듣기 — 제이슨 씨와 후엔 씨가 이야기해요. 잘 듣고 답해 보세요.

1) 요즘 날씨가 어때요?

What has the weather been like lately?

2) 후엔 씨 고향의 여름 날씨는 어때요?

What is summer like in Huyen's home town?

고향의 여름 날씨 stacks three nouns with one 의 — the summer weather of the home town. 의 marks possession and is pronounced [에] in this position. In speech it is often dropped altogether: 고향 여름 날씨.

1 다음 글을 읽고 질문에 답해 보세요.

1 Read the passage and answer the questions.

한국은 봄, 여름, 가을, 겨울, 사계절이 있습니다.

Korea has four seasons: spring, summer, autumn and winter.

봄은 3월부터 5월까지입니다. 봄은 따뜻하고 꽃이 많이 핍니다.

Spring runs from March to May. It is warm and a great many flowers bloom.

사람들은 봄에 꽃을 보러 갑니다.

People go to see the blossom in spring.

여름은 6월부터 8월까지입니다. 아주 덥고 비가 많이 옵니다.

Summer runs from June to August. It is very hot and it rains a great deal.

그래서 한국 사람들은 봄, 가을, 겨울보다 여름에 휴가를 많이 갑니다.

So Koreans take their holidays in summer more than in spring, autumn or winter.

9월부터 11월까지의 가을입니다. 가을은 쌀쌀하고 단풍이 매우 아름답습니다. 그래서 등산을 많이 합니다.

September to November is autumn. It is chilly and the autumn leaves are extremely beautiful, so people go hiking a lot.

12월부터 2월까지의 겨울입니다. 겨울에는 눈이 오고 춥습니다.

December to February is winter. It snows and it is cold.

사람들은 겨울에 눈썰매, 스키를 타러 갑니다.

In winter people go sledging and skiing.

The whole passage is in the formal -습니다 style from chapter 8, and it is the register you will meet in every textbook, notice and news report. Read it aloud once in this style and once as -어요 to feel the difference: the content is identical, the distance is not.

부터 ... 까지 is "from ... until", the pair you met with times in chapter 5. It works the same for months, dates and places: 3월부터 5월까지, 9시부터 6시까지, 서울부터 부산까지.

-고 links the two things a season does — 따뜻하고 꽃이 핍니다, 쌀쌀하고 단풍이 아름답습니다. It is the plain listing 고 from chapter 12, and it lets each sentence carry two facts instead of one.

휴가는 leave from work — the holiday an employed adult takes. A school holiday is 방학, and the two are not interchangeable. Korea's summer 휴가 season peaks in late July and early August, when much of the country takes the same fortnight off at once.

단풍 is the turning of the autumn leaves, and it is a season in its own right in Korea: the front of colour is tracked on the news as it moves south down the peninsula, and 단풍놀이, going out to look at it, fills the mountain trails every October.

1) 빈칸에 맞는 계절을 쓰세요.

1) Write the right season in each blank.

1월 · 2월 → 겨울

January–February → winter, given

3월 – 5월 → (봄)

March–May → spring

6월 – 8월 → (여름)

June–August → summer

9월 - 11월 → (가을)

September–November → autumn

12월 → 겨울

December → winter, given

Winter is printed at both ends of the table because it straddles the turn of the year — December at one end, January and February at the other. That is the one item the exercise gives you for free, and it is also the clue that the table is meant to be read as a loop.

2) 맞으면 ○, 틀리면 X 하세요.

2) Mark ○ if true, X if false.

① 봄은 단풍이 아름답습니다.

Spring has beautiful autumn leaves — , that is autumn

② 여름에 휴가를 많이 갑니다.

People take their holidays mostly in summer — ○

③ 한국은 가을에도 눈이 옵니다.

It snows in Korea in autumn as well — , the passage puts snow in winter

Item ③ hides the 도 from chapter 9 — 가을에도, "in autumn as well". The statement is false not because it snows nowhere but because the passage places snow in winter only. Read the season, not just the verb.

3) 사람들은 겨울에 무엇을 합니까?

3) What do people do in winter?

→ 눈썰매, 스키를 타러 갑니다.

→ They go sledging and skiing.

타러 갑니다 is the -으러 가다 from chapter 13, going somewhere in order to do something. And 타다 covers both here, as it covered bicycles and buses in chapter 9 — anything you get on or into.

2 여러분 고향의 계절과 날씨는 어때요? 고향의 계절과 날씨를 소개하는 글을 써 보세요.

2 What are the seasons and weather like back home? Write a short piece introducing them.

○○○의 계절

The seasons of ○○○

Use the passage as a template rather than starting from nothing: how many seasons, which months each covers, what the weather does, and what people do because of it. That last link — 그래서 — is what turns a list of temperatures into a description of a place.

단어장 — vocabulary

사계절

the four seasons

매우 very, extremely 스키를 타다

to ski

매우 is the written cousin of 아주. Both mean "very", but 매우 belongs to essays, reports and news copy, while 아주 and 너무 do the work in speech. Seeing it here is a signal about the register of the passage, not about its strength.

문화와 정보 — 재난, 안전 안내 문자

Culture & information — emergency and safety alert texts

한국 정부는 재난 시에 모든 국민에게 문자를 보냅니다.

The Korean government sends a text message to everyone in the country when there is an emergency.

봄에는 미세먼지, 여름에는 폭염과 호우를 미리 알려 줍니다.

In spring it warns of fine dust, and in summer of heatwaves and heavy rain.

겨울에는 한파, 폭설, 건조 주의보를 알립니다.

In winter it announces cold-wave, heavy-snow and dry-weather advisories.

여러분도 휴대 전화에서 이런 문자 메시지를 받았습니까?

Have you had messages like these on your phone?

앞으로 날씨와 재난, 안전 문자를 잘 확인하세요.

From now on, do read the weather and emergency alerts carefully.

These are not optional notifications. 긴급 재난 문자 are broadcast by the government to every phone in the affected area — no subscription, no app, and for the highest grades no way to switch them off. They arrive with a loud alarm that overrides silent mode, which is alarming the first time and then simply part of living in Korea.

행정안전부, the Ministry of the Interior and Safety, sends the national alerts; a city or province sends its own under its own name, as [서울시] does here. The bracketed sender at the front of every message tells you how wide the area is.

경보 and 주의보 are two different levels and the difference matters. 주의보 is an advisory — conditions are developing, pay attention. 경보 is a warning — the threshold has been crossed, act. Both appear in these texts, and reading which one you have been sent tells you how seriously to take it.

미세 먼지 is fine particulate pollution, the spring problem that dominates Korean weather talk from March to May. On bad days the alert asks you to keep children indoors and wear a mask, and the forecast is reported alongside the temperature.

질문 — questions

1) 정부에서 언제 문자 메시지를 보내요?

When does the government send text messages? → 재난 시에 보내요

2) 어느 계절에 어떤 메시지가 자주 와요?

Which messages come in which season? → 봄에는 미세먼지, 여름에는 폭염과 호우, 겨울에는 한파와 폭설

3) 여러분은 어떤 재난, 안전 문자를 받았어요?

Which emergency or safety alerts have you received?

긴급 재난 문자 — sample alerts

[서울시] 오늘 07시 서울지역 미세먼지 경보 발령. 야외 활동 자제, 실외 활동 금지, 마스크 착용 바랍니다.

[Seoul City] A fine dust warning is in force for the Seoul area from 07:00 today. Please refrain from outdoor activity, avoid outdoor exercise, and wear a mask. — 6:50 am

12월 11일 수요일

[행정안전부] 내일 아침 수도권을 중심으로 폭설 예상되므로, 출근길 대중교통 이용 등 안전에 유의 바랍니다.

[Ministry of the Interior and Safety] Heavy snow is expected tomorrow morning, centred on the capital region. Please take public transport to work and take care. — 9:18 pm 수도권 is the capital region — Seoul, Incheon and Gyeonggi Province together, where roughly half the country lives. It is the standard unit for weather warnings, traffic reports and property news, so it is worth knowing as one word.

The messages are written in a clipped official register: particles are dropped and nouns are strung together, so it is 마스크 착용 바랍니다 rather than 마스크를 착용하시기 바랍니다, and 야외 활동 자제 rather than 야외 활동을 자제해 주십시오. You are not expected to write like this, only to read it fast, so pick out the nouns first — 미세먼지, 경보, 마스크 — and the instruction will be clear before you have parsed the grammar.

7월 26일 금요일

[행정안전부] 오늘 07시 10분 서울, 인천, 경기 일부 호우 경보 발령. 산사태, 상습 침수 등 안전에 주의 바랍니다.

[Ministry of the Interior and Safety] A heavy rain warning is in force from 07:10 today for Seoul, Incheon and parts of Gyeonggi. Please beware of landslides and flooding in areas that flood repeatedly. — 7:17 am

Both summer alerts are dated July, three weeks apart, and that is the shape of a Korean summer: 장마, the rainy season, through late June and July, then the heat that follows it. 호우 is heavy rain, 폭염 is extreme heat, and in a bad year you get both in the same month.

발음 1 — 다음을 듣고 따라 읽으세요.

작년 [장년]

jang-nyeon

춥네요 [춸네요]

chum-ne-yo

피었네요 [피언네요]

pi-eon-ne-yo

All three are the same rule, and it is one of the most far-reaching in Korean: a stop consonant before a nasal turns into the matching nasal. ㄱ becomes ㅇ, so 작년 is [장년]. ㅂ becomes ㅁ, so 춥네요 is [춸네요]. ㄷ and ㅌ and ㅍ become ㄴ, so 피었네요 is [피언네요].

This is why -네요 deserves a pronunciation section of its own. Its ㄴ reshapes the consonant in front of it every time the stem ends in a stop — 좋네요 [죤네요], 먹네요 [멍네요], 없네요 [엄네요]. The spelling never changes; the sound always does.

작년 and 올해 are a natural pair for this chapter: last year and this year, the two things weather is always compared against. The full set is 작년, 올해, 내년 — and note that 올해 and 내년 do not follow the same pattern, so they are learned one by one.
